

Subj: #4 Newsletter, House of Prose 21st August 2014

Fellow book-lovers:

Welcome to another newsletter from House of Prose. For your information during the past week we have received 955 new books in all of our locations

As always below, please find a sampling of just a few of the 955 books we have received this week, which is a cross-section of our various types of books. All shelves are looking full and healthy, particularly in the Garden Centre location. Kids books are all stocked up and waiting for the little ones' return from their summer holiday.

The winner of our free bundle book this week is Louise Currie. Congratulations Louise! Just let us know when and where you want to pick up your 'bundle.'

Presently I am reading the last few pages of Jean Auel's never ending saga about Ayla, the girl who first app-eared in Clan of the Cave Bear. I deserve a medal for plowing through the entire 6 book of the series. It has taken her 20 years to write it and me the same! Enough!! Now I can dedicate the next 20 years to something else.

I finished "How to Stop Worrying and Start Living" by Dale Carnegie last week. Amazing how un-dated it was even after these some 70 years since it was first published! I particularly liked how he uses lots qnd lots of examples to help bring home the points he wants to make in a much clearer manner

A little tidbit;

I was talking to someone the other day about movies. She was really surprised how many good movies were books first. I have always felt there are a lot of bad books made into good movies – and visa versa! But I have come up with a few movies (maybe good, maybe bad), which you might be surprised to learn were books first. These books are NOT normally best-sellers Let me know if you were aware they were all books first; and give me a few others you might know of.
