MOST POPULAR AUTHORS 'RIGHT NOW' - AMAZON

I was browsing through the Amazon website the other day wondering how my favourite authors would fare in the Amazon top 100 list of best-selling authors. Of course, the first name on the list was James Patterson - a man who writes with both hands at the same time in conjunction with a group of 5 other authors - all pushing out the next (what is the opposite of opus?) on a monthly basis. Ok, that one I understand just from the sheer number of books he publishes. Nora Roberts was 6th - I also understand, very popular with the romance crowd. Stephen King was 7th. That seems about right. John Sandford was 12th, well, ok. Lee Child 20th - just one book a year, understandable. Then Grisham came in 23rd. That seems a bit low; followed by Michael Connelly in 33rd position. Now wait just a minute! And one of my newly acquired favourites - Greg Iles - 62nd. Ridiculous! So E.L. James of 50 Shades fame, 77th. Fleck is the new?
